Returning home from war to the classrooms of 1950s Notre Dame, Sam Conry has lost a brother. Peter was the biggest name on campus, a man who Sam looked up to in every way. Now his memory shadows him.

Sam had never met Elle Quinn before. Peter had spoken of her only once. Sam learns of the relationship that his brother had with Elle, and he sees the goodness of her as he searches to regain structure in his own life.

In this tender love story, Sam explores his trust of friendship, love, and his belief in God under the bells of the Fighting Irish.
